

ABSTRACT

The invention provides a method for detecting gynecological cancers, such as endometrial cancer, ovarian cancer, cervical cancer, vulvar cancer, uterine cancer or fallopian tube cancer, by determining the presence of extracellular heat shock proteins. The invention also provides kits useful for detecting gynecological cancers.